

Autumn A. Arnett

Autumn A. Arnett is the author of Let's Stop Calling it an Achievement Gap, and a fierce advocate for equity in education. Thanks to a personal background that challenges conventional stereotypes about race and class, she is passionate about shedding light on the nuances behind the ideas of equity and inclusion, and challenging conventionally held notions about what equity really means in twenty-first century America. Autumn is a Clark Atlanta University alumna, and a staunch defender of Historically Black Colleges and Universities.

SUGGESTED TOPICS

Contact Autumn

www.a2arnett.com

@A2Arnett

Booking Information:

(301) 974 -7945

aaarnett7@gmail.com

How to Lead for Equity

An examination of ideas and practices that lead to equitable school outcomes - and the ones that hinder it.

Black Colleges Matter

Understanding the place HBCUs and other Minority-Serving Institutions occupy in an Integrated Society.

Unpacking Inequity

A Deep Dive into the historical context which led to the achievement gap, and why inequities persist.

What Does Inclusion Look Like?

Understanding the difference between 'Diversity,' 'Inclusion,' and 'equity,' and how each fits into your overall goals.

Tackling Implicit Bias

Unpack the beliefs and practices that are stifling growth mindset in your school or organization.